

OSTERLEY PARK

Osterley Park and its surrounding gardens, park and farmland is one of the last surviving country estates in London.

In the 16th century, Sir Thomas Gresham, financier and adviser to Elizabeth I, began amassing land at Osterley. In 1565 he built a house here in a very similar location to the one you will see today. Nearly 150 years later, in 1713, the Osterley estate was acquired by the Child family and in the 1760s they commissioned Robert Adam to remodel it. A banking family with a house in central London, they used Osterley as a country villa for entertaining. When the heiress Sarah Sophia Child married the 5th Earl of Jersey in 1804, the family moved to the Jersey estate at Middleton Park. Osterley remained in family ownership, used on occasions by the Jerseys or leased out, until the 9th Earl of Jersey gave it to the National Trust in 1949.

Walking routes are only accessible during park opening times - winter 8 - 6pm and summer 8 - 7.30pm. Full details can be found on our website www.nationaltrust.org.uk/osterley.

Entrance to the park is free, admission charges apply to Osterley Park House and Garden, and there is a charge of £3.50 for parking.
